

CHINESE NEW YEAR OF THE SNAKE MENU

31/1 - 1/2/2025

£60pp

Chinese banquet menus consist of 8 or 9 dishes.
The sound of 8 in Chinese is similar to the words “prosper”, while 9 is similar to “long-lasting”, whether in life or marriage.

Crispy Duck Gua Bao

For the Chinese, the duck is a symbol of fidelity. Served as a whole, it also represents peace and unity, and a lasting union

Crispy Money Bags

Dumplings filled with pork & vegetables represent wealth because they are created in the shape of historical Chinese gold ingots or money bags.

Vegetable Spring Rolls

Spring rolls get their name because they are traditionally eaten during the Spring Festival
'A ton of gold' (because fried spring rolls look like gold bars) — a wish for prosperity.

Steamed Scallops with XO

Scallops are pronounced “dai zi” in Chinese, which can also refer to raising children, and are seen as a representation of fertility and life

Piquant King Prawns

In Chinese, the word prawn sounds like the word for laughter “Haa”.
Therefore, eating prawns is associated with liveliness and happiness.

Sweet & Sour Chicken

Red dishes are featured at weddings as red is the colour of happiness.
You'll find them served at New Year's banquets for the same reason.

Broccoli Spears, Asparagus in Birds Nest

Long Green vegetables for a green year and good harvest.

Vegetable Chow Mein

Noodles are a symbol of a long life

Fortune Cookies/Oranges

Eating and displaying oranges is believed to bring good luck and fortune
The Chinese for orange is “chéng” which sounds the same as the Chinese for 'success
